A MESSAGE FROM THE CEO

2020 introduced challenges most of us have never experienced in our personal or professional lives. To put the data that will be shared in this report into proper context, it's important to remember that the thousands of employees who responded to these surveys were living through a year that included:

- Presidential impeachment
- Global coronavirus pandemic
- Lockdowns
- 14.8% unemployment in April (an 11.3% increase in two months)
- Social injustice and unrest
- Contentious local and national elections
- A GDP drop of 5% in Q1 and 31.4% in Q2 followed by growth of 33.4% in Q3 and 4% in Q4

No one went through the year unaffected by some or all these events. Understandably, some organizations chose not to survey their employees in 2020, but those who did were richly rewarded with information that allowed them to invest in their employees in meaningful ways.

We at People Element were fortunate to witness organizations navigate these events to adapt, improve, and ultimately strengthen their cultures and communities. We're proud to be associated with these organizations and to have played a small part in their efforts.

IMPACT OF ENGAGEMENT

Increased employee engagement results in reduced turnover, improved productivity, better customer retention, stronger financial health, and most importantly, happier employees. Having an effective employee engagement strategy is therefore a key ingredient to the operational and financial success of any organization. Whether your approach to employee experience feedback uses continuous listening or an annual engagement survey, we hope this report can provide you additional context as you work to improve employee engagement at your organization.

The data in the 2021 People Element Engagement Report includes responses from thousands of US-based employees across numerous industries including manufacturing, healthcare, education, transportation, construction, real estate, finance, municipalities, government, technology, and farming.

EMPLOYEE SATISFACTION RESULTS

Understanding employee dissatisfiers gives us better context to overall employee engagement and helps us determine where to focus our efforts.

Employees were least satisfied in the following areas:

- Compensation 41% of respondents were dissatisfied with compensation. Specifically, they felt they were not paid fairly in comparison to others at the organization doing similar work.
- Employee Voice 36% of respondents noted dissatisfaction with feeling they had a voice within the organization. Responses were least favorable around leadership listening to and caring about their concerns.
- Leadership 35% of respondents were dissatisfied with leadership, scoring them particularly low on effectively resolving key organizational issues.
- Feeling Valued 35% of respondents said they did not feel valued. They specifically referenced not feeling valued by leadership.
- Communication 35% of respondents expressed concerns with communication. The lowest scores in this area were centered around communication between departments not being effective.

EMPLOYEE ENGAGEMENT - LEVELS

Our engagement index uses a set of six questions to determine levels of engagement within an organization. The index measures the commitment, effort, connection, and advocacy a person feels towards their company.

Employee populations are divided up into four engagement groups:

Actively Disengaged	Opportunity Group	Engaged Contributor	Actively Engaged
Employees who consistently view their work and the company unfavorably Most likely to disparage and talk negatively about the company and leaders Tend to blame the company and point finger at others Will quit, or stay and contribute to a negative environment if no change occurs	Employees who are ambivalent about their work and workplace Work just enough to get by and fly under the radar Do not actively contribute to the workplace The main reason for staying is contractual and to get paid	Employees who are satisfied with their work and speak well of the company Meet expectations of the job but not likely to take risks or go above and beyond Tend to stay in their comfort zone Committed to their work	Employees who take personal satisfaction in what they do and how they do it Likely to take personal risks and stretch themselves to do more and learn new things Learning and growing, helping the company develop Love their work

EMPLOYEE ENGAGEMENT - TRENDS

Engagement levels were up in most organizations in 2020 resulting in a 5% increase in overall employee engagement. Initially, this may be surprising with the volatility of the employment market but the data reveals employees felt more connected to their organizations and coworkers as they came together to support each other and overcome business challenges. Many companies and their employees were suddenly very aligned in their goals, resulting in a significant improvement in overall engagement.

2020 Engagement

Overall employee engagement is determined by adding the Engaged/Contributor and Actively Engaged groups together.

Actively Disengaged    Opportunity Group    Engaged/Contributor    Actively Engaged    Overall Engagement

KEY DRIVERS OF ENGAGEMENT IN 2020

LEADERSHIP COMMUNICATION

VOICE & FEELING VALUED

Key drivers were determined by conducting Spearman correlations on all surveys' items to highlight which showed both a high correlation against our engagement index as well as a low score.

The feedback and analysis were clear, the areas that would most improve employee engagement were Leadership Communication and Employee Voice/Feeling Valued. Effectively executed strategies that improve communication and voice will result in increased engagement and happier employees.

LEADERSHIP COMMUNICATION

Respondents who rated leadership communication as an opportunity, specifically identified communicating a clear vision, sufficient communication, being kept informed, and confidence and trust in leadership as areas for improvement.

VOICE & FEELING VALUED

Respondents who rated voice/feeling valued as an opportunity, specifically identified feeling valued, having a voice, their ideas being given consideration, and leadership showing they value employees as areas for improvement.

LEADERSHIP COMMUNICATION

Employees are consistently looking for more stability, reassurance, and direction. Information empowers them to make necessary decisions for themselves and their families. Additionally, according to the Prosci 2016 Best Practices in Change Management Report, 74% of employees prefer to receive business messages from their CEO/President or Executive Manager. As things continue to change and settle in 2021, high employee engagement levels will rely on an effective leadership communication strategy.

Recommendations:

Now is a great time to revisit your communication strategy making sure it includes People Element's 5 keys to an effective communication strategy:

1. Communications should always be appropriately transparent, empathic & specific.
2. Listen – create opportunities for them to provide input & ask questions to leadership.
3. Use as many delivery mediums as possible as people absorb information in different ways (company/department meeting, video, recorded messages, email, etc.).
4. Establish an appropriate frequency of communications and be consistent.
5. Under the current circumstances, we recommend the following topics be covered:
  - Clear vision for your organization in 2021 and the next 3 to 5 years.
  - How they can help the company reach its goals – help them connect themselves to your vision.
  - Financial status/health of the company.
  - Items that may impact them (remote work policies, social distancing policies, etc.).
  - Provide appropriate encouragement, hope, and gratitude for their efforts.

EMPLOYEE VOICE & FEELING VALUED

As humans, we all want to feel that we're important and that we matter to those around us. Likewise, employees hope their relationship with an organization is more than just work product and a paycheck. Being a valued member of a team working to accomplish a common goal creates meaning in the work an employee does. Additionally, knowing that input and feedback are not just welcome but important to the organization only increases how valued an employee feels and ultimately, how engaged they are.

Recommendations:

Have you updated your employee experience strategy recently? Many organizations spent 2020 making necessary adjustments to continue to operate as effectively as possible under the circumstances and are just now able to take the time to revisit what their employees might be experiencing day to day. Consider the following as you refresh your strategy:

- How important are your employees to your company? Have you told them? Provide appropriate encouragement, hope, and gratitude for their efforts.
- Evaluate the effectiveness of your employee recognition program. Recognition should be individual and meaningful.
- Provide and communicate various ways for employees to give feedback (suggestion box, roundtable discussions, company/department meetings, employee surveys).
- Use any and all opportunities to communicate what actions you're taking as a result of their feedback.

KEY CONSIDERATIONS FOR 2021

It's important we account for factors that are already emerging in 2021 as well as your own internal considerations. These areas have been identified by recent employee engagement surveys as well as HR industry experts as important elements in any engagement strategy moving forward.

Remote work

Life experience

Diversity & inclusion

Growth & development

REMOTE WORK

The percentage of remote workers is expected to double in 2021 according to a survey conducted by Enterprise Technology Research (ETR). A Gartner CFO survey shows 74% of CFOs intend to shift workers permanently remote after COVID ends. With this shift in the workforce, it's important to consider the potential impact on employee connectivity to the culture, communication challenges, work/life balance, and coworker relationships.

LIFE EXPERIENCE

In 2021 we will begin to see a more aggressive shift by employers to take a bigger role in supporting the life experience of employees rather than just the work experience. Gartner's 2020 ReimagineHR Employee Survey identified that employers that support employees with their life experience see a 23% increase in the number of employees reporting better mental health and a 17% increase in the number of employees reporting better physical health. There is also a real benefit to employers, who see a 21% increase in the number of high performers compared to organizations that don't provide the same degree of support to their employees.

DIVERSITY & INCLUSION

Every employee having the opportunity to contribute leads directly to feeling valued and higher engagement. According to a recent study, companies who are inclusive have 2.3 times higher cash flow per employee over a three-year period, are 1.7 times more likely to be innovation leaders in their market, and 2.9 times more likely to identify and build leaders.

"Inclusion is the ability to engage diversity in your workforce, so that everyone has equal opportunities to contribute."

GROWTH & DEVELOPMENT

Employees will apply increased pressure on their organizations to offer learning and development courses and resources to up-level the value they can provide their companies. The absence of employer programs may lead employees to engage easily accessible online solutions to enhance their skills to improve the quality of their job opportunities elsewhere.
